Program: “Assessment Tools for Development as Individual and Team Members”

People are a key component of every organization. Through the use of assessment and coaching tools, we can improve our effectiveness as individuals and team members to positively impact our families, organizations, and communities. This program will focus on some of the tools used to help individuals and teams to understand and appreciate individual strengths, differences and ways of interacting for increased self-understanding and acceptance of others, improved communication and reduced interpersonal and intra-organizational conflict. Specifically, the discussion will focus on how the MBTI Step II, FIRO-B, and 360 are used at Carnegie Mellon University for coaching, leadership development, career planning and team development.

Presenter: Lola Komisin, Ed D., SPHR - is the Organizational Effectiveness Consultant for Carnegie Mellon University and has more than 15 years of experience in developing and implementing leadership and organizational development interventions in a variety of settings. Lola began her career as a mental health therapist and served as adjunct faculty for more than 10 years for the College of Health and Human Development, Penn State University. As a professional development manger and executive coach, Lola has designed and implemented corporate-wide initiatives related to leadership and management development, coaching, communication, 360 degree feedback, performance management,
